

FIGURE 2.1 Attachment Behaviors and Development in Children

Though attachment is formed during the first three years of life, there are specific periods that are key in the formation of attachment. Zeanah and his colleagues (2011a) point to the following developmental periods, which mark certain attachment-related biobehavioral shifts in infants (see Figure 2.1).